Artist Statement
Lulu Jiang

Lulu Jiang is an Emmy-Nominated Multimedia Designer and Collage Artist originally from Beijing and currently based in New York City. She earned her MFA in Computer Arts from the School of Visual Arts in New York in 2016, following her BFA in Experimental Animation from Renmin University of China in 2014.

With a background in design and film, Lulu infuses her collage works with imagination, experimentation, and a playful twist. Her creations often incorporate painted materials, fabric, and found objects, resulting in pieces that are both visually captivating and relatable.

Frequent travels to Europe and Asia serve as a multicultural of inspiration for Lulu, who passionately collects vintage magazines and collage materials during her journeys. She holds a profound appreciation for the unique color, texture, and photographs found in vintage magazines, considering them irreplaceable. Lulu approaches her art in an eco-conscious way by using found objects, giving them new life while honoring their sentimental value.

In her capacity as a digital artist, Lulu has collaborated with prestigious clients such as Elle, Harper's Bazaar, Amazon, CNN, NBC, and Youtube. Specializing in art direction, motion graphics, and branding, she brings a unique blend of creativity and perspective to her projects.

She has received numerous awards. Her short film Skin Deep won 20 awards internationally, and her artworks were accepted in 9 exhibitions in New York City.
